I play ardent outsiders
who have their own particular rules, who sense their own truths...
and occasionally impart wisdom no one else can see.

A Little Bit About Me

As a kid, I dressed up as a gypsy fortune teller for six Halloweens in a row. My mom had sewn the original costume and had to add an extra five inch ruffle on the bottom of the skirt by year four. I loved the bangles and the kohl make-up and the boho drama of it all. Not to mention astrology, palmistry and tarot cards - and being able to hold folks attention and read them for their secrets and give them advice about whatever I "saw". In college, I started studying tarot cards as I studied for my B.A. in Theatre and my two great passions collided.

Every good tarot reader learns your story as they help you write the ending you want - maybe by rewriting a previous episode that has left you with shame. Our favorite characters in tv or in the movies do the same thing - when they win the guy, or the spelling bee, or the international media conglomerate, it's like seeing the Queen of Wands and the Six of Swords and the Star cards fall on the table in front of us. We root for certain story arcs because we identify with certain characters and all need something that offers redemption and a promise that our happy ending is possible. That's why I got into tarot cards. And acting, playwriting, improv and sketch. I really dig being a part of an inspirational story. I want to move people to feel hope...and maybe feel empowered to write their own happy endings.
